WHO SHOULD ATTEND

Executives leading diverse individuals or teams whose ability to mobilize the talents and efforts of others directly affects the successful achievement of company goals.

INDIVIDUAL KEY BENEFITS

Participants will leave the program equipped with the concepts and tools needed to better understand the principles of human behavior within organizations. The knowledge gained from program activities will help executives increase acceptance of their ideas and work requests and establish productive working relationships with subordinates, peers, and superiors. Additionally, the insights gleaned into each individual's behavior will help them further develop their leadership skills and remain resilient in the face of work- and team-related challenges. Participants will be supported by a post-program follow-up as they put their new skills into practice.

ORGANIZATIONAL BENEFITS

All ESMT programs are practice-oriented. This means that participants profit from the current state of research being applied in business today, research that can be implemented once participants return to their organizations. Furthermore, the programs provide both the participants and their organizations with fresh perspectives and a solid network of global contacts. In addition, each program is an opportunity to promote and retain valuable personnel.

Leading with Psychological Intelligence (LPI) responds to the increasing demands on executives to enhance their leadership efficacy through better connections with subordinates, peers, and superiors. Psychological research offers many insights into human behavior. This program applies these research findings directly to the everyday behavior of modern executives, helping them to build foundations for productive relationships with people in organizations, to recognize what motivates both themselves and others, and to learn the most effective ways of working with a range of individuals. Supported by research, participants will discover how they perform as leaders through feedback analysis, experiential exercises, mini-lectures, small group discussions, peer consultations, and coaching sessions.

The number of participants in this course will be significantly lower than is standard in the executive education industry in order to encourage active individual involvement and ensure personalized attention to each participant's needs. Several modules of the program will be delivered in small groups with a 1:7 faculty-to-participant ratio. Executive coaching sessions will be provided individually for each participant.
