This program is a leadership laboratory, aiming to enhance your ability to address complex challenges you face in your role. The program's experiment-based format helps reveal your blind spots as a leader and develop strategies to combat them. You will also learn how to influence decision makers to support your initiatives, how to diagnose and remedy potentially toxic organizational dynamics, and how to bolster your leadership through a productive professional network. The laboratory's challenging but safe environment asks you to reflect on your own experiences, experiment with different leadership approaches, and receive valuable feedback and support from both faculty and peers. The individual learning elements are complemented by a full day of group executive coaching, as well as post-program follow-ups.

Who should attend the program?

Executives with at least five years of experience in leading teams who wish to be more effective in reaching organizational goals through people.

Gianluca Carnabuci

Faculty

Gianluca Carnabuci

is a professor of organizational behavior at ESMT Berlin. His research examines how the informal trust networks that senior executives build “behind the company chart” affect their ability to innovate and lead others successfully. Gianluca is an experienced executive education speaker who has developed a wide range of leadership programs for senior executives across a variety of industries. He teaches and advises executives on how to build leadership networks that foster innovation and agility in large-scale companies, how to permeate organizational silos and enable company-wide value creation, and how to develop a compelling leadership vision that energizes and aligns stakeholders across the organization.
